EXPERIENCE:

Mr. Trevor Resurreccion is a Partner at Lynberg & Watkins, and an experienced litigator representing architects, engineers, general contractors, subcontractors, and other members of the design and construction industry. Mr. Resurreccion has handled a wide variety of construction-related cases, including claims for design errors and omissions, delays, cost overruns, mechanic's liens, construction defects, as well as catastrophic personal injury and death claims. He received his undergraduate degree in Architecture with a concentration in construction management. His undergraduate education included classes in architectural design, specifications, construction management, bid estimates, project scheduling and numerous other related courses. Mr. Resurreccion's background in the design and construction industry includes hands-on experience on construction projects, including construction administration for an international architecture firm on a high-profile project in Los Angeles and construction management for Georgetown University on a significant university project.

Throughout his undergraduate education, law school education and as a practicing attorney, Mr. Resurreccion has continued his involvement in the design and construction industry as an active member of industry associations. As an attorney, he prides himself on his commitment to advocacy for his clients, small and large. He has experience in all aspects of litigation, including arbitrations, trials and appeals. He is licensed to practice law in California and Nevada.
